Macmillan Information and Support Centre at St George's retains Quality Environment Mark

Congratulations to the Macmillan Information and Support Centre at St George's on retaining their Macmillan Quality Environment Mark (MQEM).

The MQEM is a detailed quality framework used for assessing whether cancer care environments meet the standards required by people living with cancer.

To receive the award, environments have to score highly in areas such as use of space, comfort and atmosphere, personal and social interaction and health and well being.

The two assessors (from an independent organisation called DNVGL) were highly impressed with the centre, and it was awarded a higher number of MQEM points when compared to past assessments. The centre will now retain the mark for a further three years.
