Renal Clinical Psychology Service

This leaflet explains more about the clinical psychological support available for adult patients with kidney disease.

What is a clinical psychologist?
Clinical psychologists specialise in helping people learn skills to cope with, or feel better in, challenging situations. They are not medical doctors, so do not prescribe medication or use other physical treatments. Talking therapies are used instead to help people whose psychological wellbeing is directly affected by their physical health problems.

Clinical psychologists are registered with the Health and Care Professions Council (HCPC).

Why would I want to see a clinical psychologist?
Kidney disease can have a major impact on your life. It can be upsetting and it is common to worry about your health and the future. You may also feel anxious about having medical procedures.

You may feel anxious, sad or angry about what is happening to you or find it hard to accept your diagnosis or to make the necessary lifestyle changes. You may feel overwhelmed and unable to cope at times. Sometimes other problems such as longer term issues with stress, anxiety or low mood may affect how you deal with kidney disease.

Speaking to a clinical psychologist gives you an opportunity to discuss and address some of these issues with someone trained and experienced in dealing with them.

How can I get referred?
If you would like to see a clinical psychologist, please speak to any member of your renal team.

Your doctor, nurse, dietitian or social worker will then discuss the referral with you.

If you have any special requirements regarding your appointment, such as needing an interpreter please let the referrer know so that this can be arranged.

What happens after I am referred?
After you have been referred, the clinical psychologist will contact you by phone or letter to arrange a first appointment. If there is a waiting list for an appointment, they will let you know how long this is. You may also be sent a brief questionnaire for you to fill in and bring to your first appointment.
What will happen when I meet the clinical psychologist?
The first meeting will be a discussion about how you are coping and issues that are concerning you. The clinical psychologist will ask you some background details and explore with you what support may help the most.

You may decide not to take up any further appointments, or another service may be more suited to your needs which you will then be helped to access. You can always be referred back to the renal clinical psychology service if you need it in the future.

If psychological support within the renal service would be helpful now, the clinical psychologist will arrange to meet with you for a number of sessions. This may be as an outpatient or on a ward if you are an inpatient.

Will my information be confidential?
The clinical psychologist will take notes during or after your appointment. These will be kept separately from your main medical records and stored securely and confidentially. A summary of the session will be put into your main medical notes, to help the whole renal team look after you in the best way they can.

If there is anything you wish to keep confidential, please discuss this with the clinical psychologist. Your wishes will be respected as much as possible, but information about any serious or potential risk to you or other people will need to be shared with the relevant services.

Letters which summarise the work you and the clinical psychologist do together will be sent to your GP, and the person who referred you. These letters will also be filed in your main medical records.

What if I do not want to see a clinical psychologist?
Any referral to the clinical psychologist should be discussed with you first and only made with your agreement.

You can choose not to be referred and you can change your mind after referral. This won’t affect any other aspect of your care.

Useful sources of information
St George’s renal service
www.stgeorges.nhs.uk/service/renal-medicine

Contact us
If you have any questions about the renal psychology service or would like to speak to the clinical psychologist, please contact the renal service during office hours Monday to Friday on 020 8725 2890 and leave a message. The clinical psychologist will then get back to you.

For any more urgent help regarding your mood, please speak to your GP or ward staff if you are an inpatient. Out of hours or in an emergency, please go to your nearest emergency department (ED or A&E).
For more information leaflets on conditions, procedures, treatments and services offered at our hospitals, please visit www.stgeorges.nhs.uk

Additional services

Patient Advice and Liaison Service (PALS)
PALS can offer you on-the-spot advice and information when you have comments or concerns about our services or the care you have received. You can visit the PALS office between 9.30am and 4.30pm, Monday to Friday in the main corridor between Grosvenor and Lanesborough wings (near the lift foyer).
Tel: 020 8725 2453  Email: pals@stgeorges.nhs.uk

NHS Choices
NHS Choices provides online information and guidance on all aspects of health and healthcare, to help you make decisions about your health.
Web: www.nhs.uk

NHS 111
You can call 111 when you need medical help fast but it’s not a 999 emergency. NHS 111 is available 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. Calls are free from landlines and mobile phones.
Tel: 111

AccessAble
You can download accessibility guides for all of our services by searching ‘St George’s Hospital’ on the AccessAble website (www.accessable.co.uk). The guides are designed to ensure everyone – including those with accessibility needs – can access our hospital and community sites with confidence.

Reference: REM_RCPS_02  Published: July 2019  Review date: July 2021