

Hand Therapy Relaxation Techniques - Mindful Eating

This leaflet explains more about mindful eating and how it can help reduce stress and anxiety levels. If you have any further questions, please speak to your hand therapist.

What is mindful eating?

Mindful eating is a technique which focuses on eating with attention and intention, to create an awareness of the entire process of eating. This can help reduce stress and anxiety levels and improve your mood.

What do I do?

Many activities can be undertaken mindfully, such as washing dishes, having a shower or bath, going for a walk or playing sport. Pick a different activity and try to follow the same steps above.

Below is an exercise to help practise mindful eating with a small piece of chocolate. If you can't eat chocolate, you can do the exercise with a piece of fruit. Start by going to a quiet space, sitting down and trying to focus all your attention on the chocolate. Then follow these steps:

- 1) Pick up your wrapped chocolate. Don't unwrap it yet.
- 2) Place it in the palm of your hand and notice the colours and shapes on the packaging. Feel the weight of it in your hand.
- 3) Touch the packaging with your fingers and feel the texture.
- 4) Pay attention to looking at the chocolate. Pretend that you have never seen a chocolate before and that you must examine it closely.
- 5) If your mind starts to wander and think about other things, that's fine, just notice those thoughts and bring your attention back to the chocolate.
- 6) Look at each of the different sides of the package.
- 7) Now begin to open the wrapper, perhaps noticing the movement of your arm muscles as you open the chocolate and listen for the sounds of the wrapper tearing.
- 8) Raise the chocolate to your nose. Breathe in and focus on the smell of the chocolate.
- 9) If you have thoughts like "hurry up! Let me eat the chocolate." or "what's the point of this?" just notice those thoughts and bring your attention back to the smell of the chocolate.
- 10) You may notice your mouth beginning to generate saliva and perhaps you have an urge to eat the chocolate. Be mindful and aware of these feelings and experiences.
- 11) Now slowly take a small bite of the chocolate and notice the feeling and taste of the chocolate in your mouth. Do not swallow the chocolate yet.
- 12) Try to explore the sensations of the chocolate on your tongue.

- 13) Notice the taste and sensations on your tongue and around the inside of your mouth. Pay attention to how the chocolate starts to change consistency.
- 14) Try to notice the moment when you feel like you want to swallow. Then swallow the chocolate.
- 15) Focus on the feeling in your throat as the chocolate goes down.

Now slowly eat another sort of food, and notice how it feels, tastes, smells and sounds.

What happens during mindful eating?

Mindful eating is a way of helping you focus on sensations that we often ignore or do not notice.

When you are 'mindful' you are not using energy on worries from the past or on things that may happen in the future. Your focus is on the now, which may help reduce any stress and anxiety.

It can be very difficult to focus on the present moment when you are not used to it.

It takes practice and time for mindfulness to work.
